MATT CATANZANO

Matt Catanzano is an actor, writer, and improviser living in New York City. He recently performed in an NBC Showcase in LA directed by Mick Napier. He is a graduate of Bentley University in Waltham, MA. He spent 5 years as part of the Mainstage Cast at Improv Asylum in Boston's North End performing sketch and improv comedy 7 nights a week. He was also a teacher and director at the theater. While in Boston, he acted in commercials, industrials, and independent films while performing comedy at night. He also worked for the American Pavilion at the Cannes and Venice Film Festivals.

He currently lives in NYC where he creates online sketches for his YouTube page, "Simply Unemployable" as well as doing Live Simply Unemployable Shows around the city. He has monthly shows at the People's Improv Theater (the PIT) in Manhattan and Union Hall in Brooklyn. In 2012, Simply Unemployable became a Channel Partner with Broadway Video's YouTube page, Above Average Productions. He has co-written and starred in two webseries with Above Average (Portrait STUdio & Congressional Hearings) as well as many one-off sketches. Simply Unemployable sketches have been featured on The A.V. Club, Entertainment Weekly, BuzzFeed, Digg, College Humor, Splitsider, NPR, Backstage Magazine, Mashable, and the Huffington Post, among others.
