

Daphne Brogdon knows how to reach people. Whether through her TV hosting where her improvisational skills and ability to talk to a wall served her well on “The Fashion Team” on TV Guide, “Perfect Partner” on Discovery, and most recently as the host of her own show the Food Network, “Daphne Dishes”. The “girl next door”, “you seemed like me” quality helps her connect to viewers employing her wit, down to earth approach and warmth.

The former stand up also used this quality when she launched the first ever comedy mom vlog, Coolmom.com and co created Momversation. The hugely successful Momversation was groundbreaker in online content bringing together the biggest mom bloggers via video. With robust sponsorship from brands like Target, Smart Water, Canon, just to name a few, Daphne was able to do successful branded integration on both Coolmom and Momversation using her humor.

Married to well known chef Mark Peel, mom and stepmom, Daphne has appeared on Oprah, Dr. Phil, Ricki Lake. She started her career in radio and is also a voice actress.
